REALTOR® Profile

THERESA RICHARDSON

REALTOR®
MCS, ALHS, SRES

The recent pandemic has been a challenging time for everyone, including those looking to buy or sell a home in Lancaster County.

Now that Lancaster County has moved into the green phase, it's the perfect time to buy or sell a home. Record-low interest rates are a huge benefit for buyers. And, a low home inventory means sellers may receive multiple offers on their property.

Although virtual home tours and settlements made real estate transactions possible under stay-at-home orders, nothing compares to walking through a home, or having that personal interaction between REALTOR® and client.

I believe that meeting face to face and personally going through the process, whether you are buying or selling, is best. Now that we are in green, Berkshire Hathaway HomeServices Homesale Realty is working to ensure that we can do that safely.

In the green phase, offices will be open to the public and in-office settlements will be available with agents in attendance. However, for those not ready for such interaction, drive-up settlements will still be an option.

For the safety of clients and agents, masks and social distancing will be required for in-person appointments and there will be no overlap in scheduled home showings.

Open houses also will be permitted under strict safety guidelines, including face masks and social distancing. Agents must sign in all visitors, wipe down any touched surfaces, and determine a route through the home that allows visitors to maintain social distance and, if possible, use a separate entrance and exit. No handouts or refreshments will be permitted.

I love working with people in person, educating them about the buying and selling process, and helping them meet their real estate goals. I look forward to safely offering that personal touch once again in the green phase.
