

- 7 The Galapagos Islands are in the Pacific Ocean, 1400 km from South America. A type of bird called a ground finch lives on the islands. The picture shows a ground finch.

© Gerald & Buff Corsi, Visuals Unlimited/Science Photo Library

The size of the seeds the ground finch can eat depends upon the size of the beak. To eat large seeds, a large beak is needed. The bar charts show the sizes of the beaks of ground finches on one island, in 1976 and in 1978.

