

Firefox Font Test

The test is conducted on this code:

```

<html>
<head>
<title>Test</title>

<meta http-equiv="content-style-type" content="text/css">
<style type="text/css">
body {
    font-family: helvetica;
}
</style>
</head>
<body>

Some bold text with a span in bold
Some accented characters é è À ù ö

</body>
</html>
```

On a 10.4.7 system with only default system fonts (/Library/Fonts and /Users/??/Library/Fonts are empty).
Firefox version 1.5.0.4 was installed from fresh, with no extensions and started with all default settings (preferences and profiles were removed).
Incremental changes were tested with and without reboot between them which did not change anything. The changes were:
    adding a duplicate of /System/Library/Fonts/Helvetica.dfont in ttf format in /Library/Fonts disabling this duplicate with Font Book.app changing some font options in Firefox

Results are on next page.
