Mozilla Release FAQ

Release 21 November 1999

Sections:

--- Section 1: General Questions about the Mozilla Project ---

1.1) What is Mozilla?
: Mozilla is a cousin to Netscape Communicator that is being developed by the Free Software Community with the cooperation and support of Netscape.

1.2) On what is Mozilla based?
: Mozilla is based on a very early version of Netscape Communicator 5.0 with all of the code that Netscape is unable to release due to license or export restrictions removed.

1.3) When was Mozilla released?
: The first release of Mozilla was on 31 March 1998. Since then, the code has been available vis CVS (see section 1.8) and FTP, with occasional binary releases for some platforms.

1.4) What is the current version of Mozilla?
: It would probably be best to refer to a given version of Mozilla by the date it was retrieved, e.g. August 7th (CVS). Milestone releases have their own numbering system (e.g. M7). June 5th (CVS) release.

1.5) Who is working on Mozilla?
: Several Netscape engineers, as well as plenty of people who have no affiliation with Netscape. You too can work on Mozilla, provided you have some necesary skills and software. See section 5 for details.

1.6) What resources are available to the Mozilla community?
