Dear arjuna rao chavala,

Thank you for your mail.

You don't really need permission to do this. Almost all of the Wikimedia sites such as Telugu Wiktionary are under a GFDL license. This means you can make use of the content in almost any way, provided you link to the source and the copyright message. If you're doing a "hover over" popup definition or something like that, it's just a couple of links in the box displayed.

I've copied in the communications manager, Jay Walsh, because I think you should keep in touch about your project. Once up and running it might be something Jay could get someone to cover on the Foundation's blog. Spreading knowledge is a key goal of the Foundation, there's always interest in seeing new ways of using the content, and encouraging people to create more.

Hi Wiki info team,

Thanks for the clarification.

I will keep you and Jay updated after Telugu Firefox is released

Best regards

Arjun
