How to learn how to create texts?

Almost every modern child shudders when he hears: "Today we are writing an essay". Yes, what to hide, even many adults become uncomfortable when they are asked to write a letter, a contract or just leave a review on the site. In today's world, the need to write can not escape, but how to master this skill? Simply use our Essays for sale and forget about those problems.

Where does pathological dislike of written work? This topic, of course, should be devoted to a separate article. Nevertheless, I think that all the reasons can be reduced to a single denominator: from the person beginning acquaintance with the letter, initially require too much. And the abundance of these requirements, he loses a sense of creativity.

Step 1. Emancipation: write what you want

Invite the student to write about what is in their area of interest: movies, computer games, sports — and it does not take out of the comfort zone. The line here is very thin: personally, I try to focus on what children discuss with each other, on their publications in social networks. It is important to ask to share what a person is willing to share. And yet — do not forget to praise any expression of thoughts, thus stimulating their flow.

Step 2. The definition of the development framework: to encourage creativity, but to guide him

In the first written works it is important to allow a lot: to write without structure, on any subjects, to make mistakes. Later, when the attitude to the letter as a whole becomes rather positive, it is possible to start making small corrections: to explain that in any text there is necessarily an introduction and conclusion, to begin not just to emphasize, but to correct mistakes in the text. But — no low ratings!

Step 3. Understanding: why am I writing?

The most important and frequent children's question — "why?" Unfortunately, many of us lose interest in it at school age. "Why should I describe this picture?- You must!" — answer is better it is simply impossible to figure out if your goal is to make the person weak-willed subordinate. Always explain why they need to write something.

Step 4. Developing a habit: to write every day

There will come a time when from small written works at each lesson children can be translated to independent creativity. The best option — a diary: it is inaccessible to prying eyes and easy to handle. If you feel enough power in yourself and your wards — organize something like a blog, entries in which will be available to all your team of authors. The content, volume and subject of the notes do not matter. The main thing is to develop the habit of the word.

Step 5. Don't stop: inspire by example

Sincerely and consciously will love to write it themselves. Pick up interesting materials for students, discuss what they have written, talk about books on the creation of texts (only read them yourself). Scared? If you experience this feeling, then you are on the right track.
