Further Screen Shots for Bug 654823

When ComputerEase exports a work order, it automates T-Bird getting me this...

This works flawlessly. What BillP gets is this...

if I save pitstop.fework somewhere and double-click it FieldEase opens it no problemo, if I double-click pitstop.fework in the message, it tries to open, I see a quick save dialog flash by, but FieldEase does not open it, When I look at t-bird/tools/saved files what I see is 'pitstop.fework.xml' and this is the problem. The first time I double-click *.fework, t-bird asks me how to open it and I point to FieldEase.exe, but t-bird still insists on considering this as a straight XML file (and it is XML) instead of respecting the extension. If you actually need FieldEase to test this, I think I can get you an install without horribly breaking anyone's intelectual property rights. Let me know and I will fly this by the software vendor.
