CHEAT SHEET FOR EDITATHON PARTICIPANTS

What will we do during the editathon?

1. Search for images of notable women who are (or must be) on Wikipedia.
2. Select images that are in the public domain or have a free and open license.
3. Upload them to the #VisibleWikiWomen campaign here: http://tiny.cc/VWW2019

What you need to have:

- A laptop (you can use your mobile phone too, but it's less convenient).
- A user account on Wikipedia / Wikimedia Commons. Log in, or create an account.
- A work list with the names of the women who don't have an image on Wikipedia.

What you need to learn:

- How to find images on the internet for illustrating Wikipedia
- How to upload images to Wikimedia Commons

And don't forget...

- Add the category VisibleWikiWomen_2019 to your images, or use the upload wizard that does it for you.
- Creative Commons licenses allowed: CC BY and CC BY-SA
- The image is usually in the public domain if the author of that creative work (the artist, photographer, etc) died more than 70 years ago.

Extra tips:

- If you use Google Images refine your search results with this option : Tools > Usage rights > Labeled for reuse with modification
- If you search on Flickr refine your results with: Commercial use and mods allowed
- When you find a source with many free images, use it! Browse that image collection looking for other women who are missing on Wikipedia.
- Do you need to upload many Flickr images at once? Do it with this useful tool: Flickr2Commons.

We hope you'll find this information helpful but feel free to contact us via Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram or email us at visiblewikiwomen[at]whoseknowledge[dot]org.

On WikiCommons, you can ping the user Señoritaleona to get help.