WASHINGTON STATE CHLOROTHALONIL USE SUMMARY

- Chlorothalonil is a broad-spectrum fungicide used to control fungi that threaten vegetables, trees, small fruits, turf, ornamentals, and other agricultural crops. It also controls fruit rots in cranberry bogs.
- Chlorothalonil is a general use pesticide (GUP).
- Chlorothalonil can be found in formulations with many other pesticide active ingredients. Chlorothalonil formulations are available in Washington State in liquid and spray powder.
- Chlorothalonil belongs to the chloronitrile chemical class.
- Chlorothalonil is classified toxicity category II – moderately toxic, due to its potential for eye irritation. Products containing chlorothalonil have a wide range of signal words, including “Danger” (Bravo Ultrex), “Caution” (Bioflex), and “Warning” (Bravo Weather Stik ZN). Each of these products has a different formulation and product concentration and therefore requires a different signal word.
- Usage (in pounds a.i.) of chlorothalonil in potatoes outranks any other crop usage by nearly 100-fold.
- Major crop uses in Washington State, listed alphabetically, are as follows:

CROP	WASS* 2001 EST. ACRES PLANTED	EST. % ACRES TREATED	EST. LBS. A.I./ACRE	# OF APPS	EST. ACRES TREATED	EST. LBS. A.I. APPLIED

 Commodities noted in BLUE have not had peer review input.

 Data in the above table for potatoes is provided for only potatoes grown in western Washington State. Information provided in the narrative reflects pesticide use practices for both western and eastern Washington State. However, only the data for western Washington State has been peer reviewed.

MAJOR USES (listed alphabetically):

The major use listing supplies the most commonly used formulations of the active ingredient. No discrimination or endorsement is intended.

The pesticide labels take precedence over any information contained herein. It is the responsibility of the user to comply with the label directions provided.

The following pesticide use summary reflects the general pesticide practices for the listed commodities. The use information is not intended to reflect the pesticide application practices of any individual.

BLUEBERRIES:

- Blueberries are grown primarily in Skagit (550 acres), Whatcom (450 acres), Lewis (170 acres), Clark (130 acres) and Thurston counties.
- Chlorothalonil is not used by growers of process berries. It has been replaced by azoxystrobin.
- Occasionally, fresh market growers may use chlorothalonil to control ripe rot.
- If used to control ripe rot, chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik) may be applied once prior to bud break (late March) at a rate of 1-1/8 – 1-1/2 pounds a.i. per acre. However, while registered, chlorothalonil performance has been variable and more often than not ineffective. Use is not recommended for controlling ripe rot.

CARROTS:

- Carrots are grown commercially in both eastern and western Washington. The top producing counties in eastern Washington are Benton, Franklin, Grant and Klickitat counties. The top producing counties in western Washington are Cowlitz, Skagit, Thurston and Whatcom counties.
- Chlorothalonil may be applied to control the following fungi:
 - Alternaria leaf spot and leaf blight
 - Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be used to control Alternaria. Bravo is applied at a rate of 1.4 to 1.8 pounds (1.2 – 1.5 pounds a.i.) per acre on a 7 – 10 day interval.
 - Bravo can be applied through chemigation.
 - Formulations for timing sprays have been developed to control Alternaria leaf spot and leaf blight. Bravo may be applied once in the fall and once or twice in the spring for seed-to-seed crops. For steckling production, Bravo may be applied once in the fall and once or twice after transplanting in the spring.

Cercospora leaf spot and leaf blight

- o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be used to control this disease. Bravo is applied at a rate of 1.4 to 1.8 pounds (1.2 – 1.5 pounds a.i.) per acre on a 7 – 10 day interval.
- o Bravo can be applied through chemigation.
- o Formulations for timing sprays have been developed to control Alternaria leaf spot and leaf blight. Bravo may be applied once in the fall and once or twice in the spring for seed-to-seed crops. For steckling production, Bravo may be applied once in the fall and once or twice after transplanting in the spring.

CAULIFLOWER:

- Chlorothalonil may be applied to control the following fungi:

Black spot (leaf, stem or pod spots)

- o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be used to control this disease. Bravo is applied at a rate of 1.4 pounds (1.2 pounds a.i.) per acre with enough water to cover.
- o Crops grown for seed can be sprayed at bloom and during the growing season.

Downy mildew (staghead)

- o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be applied at a rate of 1.4 pounds (1.2 pounds a.i.) per acre with enough water to cover.
- o First spray is applied as soon as the seedlings appear; repeat three times per week until the plants are set in the field. Spraying for mildew requires a complete covering of the plant. High-gallage ground equipment has been more effective than aerial applications.
- o See also Ridomil Gold/Bravo (metalaxyl-m + chlorothalonil)

Ring spot (black blight)

- o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be applied at a rate of 1.4 pounds (1.2 pounds a.i.) per acre with enough water to cover.
- o Fungicides used to control downy mildew or whiter mold may also control this disease.

CRANBERRIES:

- The primary location for cranberry production in Washington State is Grays Harbor County. The county hosts 80 growers on 900 acres in Grayland and 100 acres in North Beach near Ocean Shores. Pacific County has 600 acres near Long Beach in cranberry production. Whatcom County has 100 acres of cranberries near Lynden. All cranberry acreage is contracted with Ocean Spray Cranberries Inc., a growers' cooperative.
- Most of the Grayland acres are grown for fresh market and dry harvested with a picker. The cranberries in Pacific County (Long Beach) are produced for juice and wet harvested by flooding.
- Chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik or Echo 720) is used to control fruit rot.
 - o Applications begin at fruit set (late June – July) at a rate of 4 – 6.5 pints (3 – 4.9 pounds a.i.).
 - o Applications have a 7 to 10 days interval. No more than 3 applications are made per season.
 - o Application methods include chemigation and boom sprayer mounted on rail cart.

- o Applications must be delayed until bees have left the cranberries.
- o Chlorothalonil may also be tank mixed 2:1 with mancozeb to control twig blight.

CUCUMBER:

- There are approximately 4,000 acres of cucumbers produced in Washington State with the majority of the crop grown in Skagit (3,000 acres in western Washington) and Franklin (150 acres in eastern Washington) counties.
- Slicing and pickling cucumbers are the most common. More than 90 percent of the cucumbers grown in Washington State are produced for pickling.
- Most cucumbers are picked by hand although 25 percent of the processing cukes are machine harvested.
- Chlorothalonil may be applied to control Alternaria leaf spot and leaf blight and scab (gummosis).
 - o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be applied at a rate of 1.8 – 2.7 pounds (1.5 – 2.23 pounds a.i.) per acre.
 - o Bravo can be applied through overhead irrigation.

ONIONS:

- The county with the largest production of onions is Grant County (6,100 acres). The remaining top onion producing counties are Franklin (4,300 acres), Benton (3,500 acres), Adams, Walla Walla and Yakima counties.
- Chlorothalonil may be applied to control Botrytis leaf blight
 - o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be used to control Alternaria. Bravo is applied at a rate of 0.9 - 1.8 pounds (0.75 – 1.5 pounds a.i.) per acre on a 7 – 10 day interval.

PEACHES & NECTARINES:

- Peaches & nectarines are produced in central Washington State with approximately 2,700 acres of peaches and 1,500 acres of nectarines planted in 2001.
- Fungicides are rotated for resistance management, alternating or tank-mixing fungicides that have a different mode of action. Chlorothalonil is not a primary use fungicide.
- Chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik) may be applied at a rate of 3.1 – 4.1 pints (2.3 – 3.1 pounds a.i.) per acre to control brown rot.
 - o Applications occur during blooming period:
 - ✓ Early pink bud (early April)
 - ✓ Full bloom and/or (second week of April)
 - ✓ Petal fall (mid-April)
 - o Do not use more than 20.5 pints (15.4 pounds a.i.) per acre per season.
- Chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik) may be applied at a rate of 3.1 – 4.1 pints (2.3 – 3.1 pounds a.i.) per acre to control shothole (coryneum blight).
 - o Applications occur as follows:
 - ✓ First – 50% leaf fall in late autumn (November)
 - ✓ Second – during the dormant season (January – March)
 - ✓ Third – shuck fall (late April)
- Chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik) may be applied at a rate of 3.1 – 4.1 pints (2.3 – 3.1 pounds a.i.) per acre to control shothole (coryneum blight).

- o Applications occur three times three weeks apart beginning in January. East of the Cascades, a delayed dormant (late March) application alone is effective.

PLUMS & PRUNES:

- Prunes & plums are produced in central Washington State with an estimated 1,000 acres planted in 2001.
- Fungicides are rotated for resistance management, alternating or tank-mixing fungicides that have a different mode of action. Chlorothalonil is not a primary use fungicide.
- Chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik) may be applied at a rate of 3.1 – 4.1 pints (2.3 – 3.1 pounds a.i.) per acre to control brown rot.
 - o Applications occur during blooming period:
 - ✓ Early pink bud (early April)
 - ✓ Full bloom and/or (second week of April)
 - ✓ Petal fall (mid-April)
 - o Do not use more than 20.5 pints (15.4 pounds a.i.) per acre per season.
- Chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik) may be applied as above to control leaf spot s and russetting.
 - o Applications occur as follows:
 - ✓ First – 50% leaf fall in late autumn (November)
 - ✓ Second – during the dormant season (January – March)
 - ✓ Third – shuck fall (late April)
- Chlorothalonil (Bravo Weather Stik) may be applied at a rate of 3.1 – 4.1 pints (2.3 – 3.1 pounds a.i.) per acre to control shothole (coryneum blight).
 - o Applications occur three times three weeks apart beginning in January. East of the Cascades, a delayed dormant (late March) application alone is effective.

POTATOES, IRISH (WHITE):

- Potatoes are grown in Grant (36,000 acres), Franklin (33,000 acres), Benton (32,000 acres), Adams (24,000 acres), Walla Walla (12,000 acres), Skagit (8,000 acres), Lincoln (7,000 acres), Yakima (2,200 acres), Whatcom (3,000 acres), Klickitat (2,300 acres) and Kittitas (500 acres) counties. Most of the acreage grown in eastern Washington is under contract for processing (fries, etc.) Western Washington produces potatoes (approximately 11,000 acres) for fresh market and seed.
- Potatoes are usually grown in a four-year rotation (one year in four planted to potatoes) typically with wheat, alfalfa, field and/or sweet corn.
- Chlorothalonil may be applied to control the following fungi:
 - Early blight
 - o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be used to control this disease. Bravo is applied at a rate of 0.7 – 1.4 pounds (0.6 – 1.15 pounds a.i.) per acre on a 7 – 10 day interval. Do not apply within 7 days of harvest.
 - Late blight
 - o Chlorothalonil (Bravo Ultrex) may be applied at a rate of 0.7 - 1.4 (0.6 – 1.15 pounds a.i.) pounds per acre on a 7 – 10 day intervals. Do not apply within 7 days of harvest.

- o Chlorothalonil (Terranil 6L) may be applied at a rate of 0.75 - 1.5 pints (0.56 - 1.13 pounds a.i.) per acre on a 7 – 10 day intervals. Do not apply more than 16 pints (2 pounds a.i.) per acre per season. Do not apply within 7 days of harvest.
- o See also other chlorothalonil products: Echo 720, Echo 90DF, Equus 720 or Equus DF
- o Timing and type of application is geographically specific:
 - ✓ Columbia Basin: March to September – applied by ground, air or chemigation
 - ✓ Western Washington: May to September – applied by ground or air
- o If weather, such as heavy rains, favors late blight infections, apply at 5 – 7 day intervals. Treat vines with protectant fungicides even after die-down if vines are still green.
