

The FCC has relentlessly attacked the little broadcaster in an effort to stifle non-mainstream (commercial) opinion and art. There should be as many low powered stations in an area as there are interest groups to support these stations.

In a free country there should not be a need for "outlaw" stations. The FCC should license such "outlaw" stations and encourage all forms of free speech.