Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute: Year 2002 Calendar Multiculturalism in the Armed Forces in the 20th Century

This calendar highlights the diversity and multiculturalism of the United States Uniformed Services in the twentieth century. The calendar identifies minorities who have furthered the advancement of their racial, ethnic, or gender group while also promoting the ideals and protecting the security of the United States of America through their participation in the military services. The recognition of diversity and past accomplishments is complicated, however, by the imprecision of military record keeping. In the past, records have only very inconsistently identified particular individuals as, for example, Hispanic.

Every effort was made to include all minority groups. Emphasis was placed on those minority groups defined by DEOMI in 1996 (African American, Asian American, Hispanic, Native American, and women). The men and women featured in this calendar serve as a small sample of the minorities who heroically served the nation in the twentieth century. From World War I to the Persian Gulf War, and in organizations ranging from the Nurse Corps to the United States Marine Corps, minorities made a dramatic impact. Minorities found the strength to rally in defense of a nation even during times when the established organizations of the nation did not acknowledge the rights, or accept the equality, of the minority groups who were defending those very same organizations. Fortunately, for the sake of the security and future of the United States of America, many minorities followed the philosophy articulated by W.E.B Dubois during World War II, "First your country, then your rights."

The calendar celebrates, but is not limited to, Medal of Honor recipients, notable firsts, major activities of specific units, official military statements and regulations in regard to minority groups, and milestones for Equal Employment Opportunity laws. In an effort to detail the progress made by minority groups in their struggle to achieve equality within the military Services the compiler has included multiple entries for numerous individuals and units. The reader hence will be able to trace the service of some individuals and units from the time of their segregated training all the way through to major battles that often resulted in the receipt of a military medal.

This calendar was compiled for the Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute under an Interagency Agreement with the Federal Research Division of the Library of Congress. For this edition of the calendar, the compiler relied, in part, on previous research conducted for earlier DEOMI calendars, and would like to credit these works.

2nd Lieutenant Jackie Robinson 761st Tank Battalion

Jackie Robinson was drafted into the United States Army in April 1942, and became a second lieutenant in January 1943. He was assigned to the 761st Tank Battalion in 1944. On July 6, 1944, as Robinson was taking a bus from Camp Hood, Texas, to the base hospital to have his ankle examined for bone chips, the driver ordered him to the back of the bus. Robinson refused to move, aware that military regulations barred racial discrimination on any Army post vehicle. Military police were called, and Robinson was charged with being drunk and disorderly. In the ensuing court martial, he was cleared of all charges, and several months later, Robinson was honorably discharged.

Following his discharge, Robinson returned to baseball where he caught the eye of Branch Rickey, the general manager and part owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Robinson signed a contract with the Dodgers in 1947, becoming the first African-American baseball player in the major leagues.

Becoming an “Ace” in a single day is an honor earned by only a small number of fighter pilots around the world. On top of the singular honor of being an Ace, a status that is achieved upon getting five “kills” within a career, getting five kills in the same day is a rare feat. The distinction of being the person who last achieved this feat for the United States and possibly the last such Ace for World War II is held by 1st Lt Oscar Francis Perdomo of the 464th Fighter Squadron, 507th Fighter Group USAAF, an American pilot of Mexican ancestry. On his tenth and last combat sortie of the war, he achieved the distinction of being the last Ace of the war.

PFC Guy “Gabby” Gabaldon

On Saipan and Tinian, Mariana Islands, South Pacific, in the summer of 1944, Marine PFC Guy “Gabby” Gabaldon distinguished himself by single-handedly capturing more than 1,000 Japanese. He has the distinction of capturing more enemy soldiers than anyone else in the history of U.S. military conflicts.

A Hispanic American, Gabaldon was adopted by a Japanese-American family, who taught him Japanese. When war broke out with Japan, his “brothers” joined the U.S. Armed Forces, and his adoptive parents and sister were sent to a relocation center. Following his brothers into the Armed Forces, Gabaldon qualified as a mortar crewman, Japanese translator, and scout observer. While serving as a Japanese interpreter on Saipan, he received a Silver Star for obtaining vital information and capturing more than 1,000 enemy civilians and personnel in the face of direct fire. Working alone in front of the lines, Gabaldon persuaded the weakened Japanese soldiers, who had been commanded to fight to the death, to surrender.

The twice-wounded Gabaldon was evacuated to California, and in 1960, a movie, Hell to Eternity, depicting his exploits was released. His Silver Star was elevated to a Navy Cross in December 1960.

Navajo Code Talkers

Navajo code talkers took part in every assault the U.S. Marines conducted in the Pacific from 1942 to 1945, transmitting messages by telephone and radio in their native language, a code that the Japanese never broke. Navajo answered the military requirement for an undecipherable code because it is an unwritten language of extreme complexity. Its syntax and tonal qualities, plus its dialects, make it unintelligible to anyone without extensive exposure and training. In May 1942, the first 29 Navajo recruits attended boot camp, and later at Camp Pendleton, California, created the Navajo code. Once a Navajo code talker completed his training, he was sent to a Marine unit deployed in the Pacific Theater. The code talkers' primary job was to talk, transmitting information on tactics and troop movements, orders, and other vital battlefield communications over telephones and radios.

At Iwo Jima, Major Howard Connor, 5th Marine Division signal officer, declared, "Were it not for the Navajos, the Marines would never have taken Iwo Jima." Connor had six Navajo code talkers working around the clock during the first two days of the battle. They sent and received more than 800 messages, all without error. The Japanese, who were skilled code breakers, remained baffled by the Navajo language. In 1942, there were about 50,000 Navajo tribe members. As of 1945, about 540 Navajos had served as Marines; from 375 to 420 of these Marines had trained as code talkers.

During White House ceremonies on June 21, 2000, 21 Asian-American World War II veterans had their Distinguished Services Crosses upgraded to Medals of Honor. Seven of the 21 recipients are still living. Nineteen of the 21 veterans were members of the all-Japanese 100th Infantry Battalion, or 442nd Regimental Combat Team, for their size, they were among the most highly decorated units in U.S. military history. Some 33,000 Asian-American troops formed the 442nd Regiment, which fought in eight major campaigns in Italy, France, and Germany.

In awarding the medals, President Clinton noted that the servicemen, many of whom volunteered for service directly from the internment camps where they had been sent following Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, "did not give up on their country when too many of their countrymen gave up on them."

In August 1950, less than two months into the Korean War, Puerto Rico's 65th National Guard Infantry Regiment, the "Borinqueneers," was sent to the combat zone. Landing at the port city of Pusan on the Korean Peninsula's southern tip, where United States forces had been holding a perimeter against the communist North Korean invaders, the Puerto Rican Regiment took part in the United States breakout and drive to the north. Five months later, in late January 1951, the Borinqueneers were positioned south of the Korean capital of Seoul, under orders to take two hills being held by China's 149th Division. The successful assault took three days.

During their service in Korea, the men of the 65th Infantry won four Distinguished Service Crosses and 125 Silver Stars. The Borinqueneers were also awarded the Presidential and Meritorious Unit Commendations, two Korean Presidential Unit Citations, and the Greek Gold Medal for Bravery.

Women in the Army Air Force

Hazel Ying Lee

In September 1942, the Army Air Force (AAF) created the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron (WAFS), later named the Women Air Force Service Pilots, and appointed Nancy H. Love its commander. The highly skilled female pilots recruited by Love were sent on noncombat missions ferrying planes between factories and AAF installations. The Air Force also set up a Women's Flying Training Detachment, and eventually more than 1,000 women completed flight training. The women were considered Civil Service employees of the AAFS WAFS/WASP.

Because of their civil-service status, the 38 WASPs who died in the line of duty during World War II were buried without military honors. Among these 38 WASPs was Hazel Ying Lee, a Chinese-American pilot, who flew fighter aircraft from production factories to airbases throughout the United States. Ying Lee died in a midair collision in 1944. The WASPs successfully campaigned for military status, and in 1977 Congress designated the WASPs as veterans of World War II. In 1979, the Air Force granted them official military acceptance, and in 1984 each WASP was awarded the Victory Medal. Those who had served for more than one year were also awarded the American Theater Medal.

On June 25, 1941, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed Executive Order 8802, establishing the Fair Employment Practice Commission, which prohibited racial discrimination by any government agency. The Executive Order gave African Americans the right for the first time to become U.S. Marines.

On August 18, 1942, Headquarters and Service Battery of the 51st Composite Defense Battalion was activated at Montford Point, near Jacksonville, North Carolina. The first African-American recruit to arrive at the camp was Howard P. Perry of Charlotte, North Carolina, who arrived August 26th and was later joined by 119 recruits. From July 1942 through the end of the war, 20,000 African Americans were trained at Montford Point and inducted into the Marine Corps.

Rear Admiral Lillian Fishburne, U.S. Navy

Rear Admiral Lillian Fishburne was born March 25, 1949, into a Navy family. She was commissioned an ensign after completing Women Officers School at Newport, Rhode Island, in February 1973, and was assigned to the Naval Air Test Facility in Lakehurst, New Jersey. During her career, Fishburne assumed progressively more responsible positions. After graduating from the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in 1993, she was assigned to the Command, Control, Communications and Computer Systems Directorate, Joint Staff, and became Chief, Command, and Control Systems Support Division, the following year. Fishburne was promoted to Rear Admiral on February 1, 1998, the first female African American to attain that rank. At a brown bag luncheon with students and faculty at the Naval Postgraduate School in July 2000, Admiral Fishburne said, in response to a career-related question, “Have faith! You will get there!” She retired as Deputy Director and Fleet Liaison, Information Space Warfare Command and Control, Chief of Naval Operations, February 2001.

In 1941, some nine months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, 98 African-American enlisted men were assigned to the Armored Forces School at Fort Knox, Kentucky, the first time that African Americans had been posted to an armored section of the U.S. Army. The number of African Americans at the school increased rapidly, and in June 1941, the African-American 758th Tank Battalion (light) was formed. In October 1942, the unit was designated the 761st Tank Battalion. The 761st was sent to Europe in 1944, arriving in Normandy in October 1944. At General Patton's request, the 761st was assigned to the 26th Infantry Division, XII Corps, in General Patton's 3rd Army.
