
The upper panel shows light curves for individual nearby SNe Ia, corrected for relative distance using Hubble's law. Template light curves have been fit for each SN and indicate that the brighter SNe have light curves that are broader and decline more slowly. The lower panel shows superposition of these data after using a brightness correction derived from the light curve width.