The United States higher education system remains one of the most prestigious around the world, attracting millions of students who seek a rewarding opportunity. To promote this reputation, EducationUSA often serves as the first point of contact for prospective international students looking to study in the United States.

The windfalls of recruiting international students comprise more than the financial benefits. International students provide a diverse array of social, cultural and academic perspectives to U.S. campuses, while also sharing their positive experiences with colleagues back home. The Mexican market can provide these benefits. U.S. institutions that cooperate with EducationUSA's network of advising centers will be prepared to suit the needs of the Mexican student body. In order to disseminate specific information about your school, you must visit <http://www.educationusa.state.gov/centers/> and click on "Mexico" which will give you a list of advising centers. There, you will have the necessary contact information to talk to a representative or send literature that advertises your school.

The following are the international advising offices that will aid you in your recruitment effort:
