

The attached list is based on preliminary draft estimates of current and announced control technology installation as a result of implementing CAIR and other existing air quality regulations. The lists reflect all of the controls EPA is aware of and will be updated as more information becomes available. The data included in the list are based on an updating of data in the IPM model by the leading power sector companies affected by CAIR, a review of trade press announcements of technology installation, and discussions with States. While some control technology installations may have been omitted, or some announced installations may be cancelled, CAMD believes these lists provide an accurate picture of control technology installation currently and projected for the near future as of July 10, 2008 before the CAIR Court Decision.

Notably, future operation of the equipment once installed has not be considered here or fully evaluated by EPA, and must be also considered in the context of the recent Court Decision and the large reductions in allowance prices that has occurred for SO₂ and NO_x. EPA is planning to have the information in the list included in the next version of the Integrated Planning Model (IPM) and the NEEDS database in the last half of 2008. It will provide the foundation for future power sector modeling and analysis.

The attached list is based on preliminary draft estimates of current and announced control technology installation as a result of implementing CAIR and other existing air quality regulations. The lists reflect all of the controls EPA is aware of and will be updated as more information becomes available. The data included in the list are based on an updating of data in the IPM model by the leading power sector companies affected by CAIR, a review of trade press announcements of technology installation, and discussions with States. While some control technology installations may have been omitted, or some announced installations may be cancelled, CAMD believes these lists provide an accurate picture of control technology installation currently and projected for the near future. Notably, future operation of the equipment once installed has not been considered here or fully evaluated by EPA, and must be also considered in the context of the recent Court Decision and the large reductions in allowance prices that has occurred for SO₂ and NO_x. EPA is planning to have the information in the list included in the next version of the Integrated Planning Model (IPM) and the NEEDS database in the last half of 2008. It will provide the foundation for future power sector modeling and analysis.
