CONSENT TO PARTICIPATE IN THE EARLY PREGNANCY STUDY

The National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences is conducting a study of early pregnancy, in which you are invited to participate. The data is being collected by Survey Research Associates, Inc., a firm which specializes in health studies. In this study, urine samples from women who may be pregnant will be analyzed using newly-developed and very sensitive assays for pregnancy hormone. Two assays for human chorionic gonadotropin (hCG) and one for luteinizing hormone (LH) will be used on each specimen. This study will provide information about the usefulness of these new tests, and will also provide some information about the events of early pregnancy. For example, this study may detect conceptions that are lost before a woman realizes she is pregnant. Eventually, this project may result in improved tests for pregnancy diagnosis, and may lead to a better understanding of factors that promote a healthy pregnancy.

Participants are being asked to do the following:

1. Respond to a questionnaire at the beginning and the end of the study. These questionnaires are completely confidential. They include questions on menstrual history, use of birth control, drugs and medications, and behavior related to pregnancy.
2. Collect daily urine specimens which they will freeze for 1-2 weeks, at which time the specimens will be picked up by study personnel. Urine will be collected for up to six months or 8 weeks after a missed menstrual period that is diagnosed as pregnancy.
3. Fill out a daily check-list of four pregnancy-related questions.

Participants will be paid $10 a week for the collection and storage of these urine specimens.

The hCG assays that will be used in this study are still in the experimental stage, and in most cases will not be performed until you have completed your participation in the study. Therefore, this study will not provide you with diagnosis of your own pregnancy. You will have to obtain pregnancy diagnosis and prenatal care in the usual way. If you become pregnant in the course of this study, the investigators would like to keep in touch with you to the conclusion of your pregnancy. However, you are free to withdraw from participation in the study at any time, before or after you become pregnant.

The results of your tests will be combined with data collected from other women in order to do statistical analysis. All information in this study is completely confidential and information with your name will be stored in locked files. Although your personal test results will not be accessible by themselves you are entitled to data describing the whole study after data collection has been completed.

If you have any questions in the course of the study that cannot be adequately answered by study personnel, you are invited to directly contact the Principle Investigator, Dr. Allen J. Wilcox, of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, at 541-3445.
