Silent movie star Anna May Wong counted The Thief of Baghdad with Douglas Fairbanks in 1924 as one of her early credits. Born as Liu Tsong in Los Angeles Chinatown on January 3, 1907, Ms. Wong made her first appearance in 1922 in The Chinese Parrot and was type cast in "yellow peril" roles in numerous other films in the United States and Europe in the 1920s and 1930s, often reinforcing unfortunate racial stereotypes. She played several leading parts and in 1932 was nominated for an Academy Award for her part in Shanghai Express. Wong also appeared later in her career in variety theaters in the United States and England. She died in Santa Monica, California, on February 2, 1961.

Sergeant Daniel Ken Inouye was assigned to the 442d Regimental Combat Team, 100th Infantry Battalion, an all-Japanese American (Nisei) unit that was part of the US Fifth Army during World War II. Inouye's unit fought for three months in the bloody Rome Arno Campaign. During that time he distinguished himself as a patrol leader. His unit was then transferred to France and spent two harrowing weeks rescuing the "Lost Battalion"-part of the 141st Regiment, 36th Division, which was surrounded by German forces-an action considered one of the most significant military battles in the twentieth century. He became a platoon leader, won the Bronze Star, and received a battlefield commission to second lieutenant. After his return to Italy, he led an attack against a German position despite having suffered an abdominal wound. He led his platoon and then advanced alone against a machine gun that had his troops pinned down. He tossed two grenades "with devastating effect" before his right arm was shattered by a German rifle grenade at close range. He then threw his last grenade with his left hand and commenced firing a submachine gun. He was wounded again in the leg. With the loss of his right arm, he endured 20 months of hospitalization. He returned home as a captain with a Distinguished Service Cross, the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, and twelve other medals and citations. Following law school and legal work in his native Honolulu, he was elected as a Democrat to the Hawaiian House of Representatives in 1954 and to the US House of Representatives in 1959. In 1962 he was elected to the US Senate, an office he still holds.

Sergeant First Class Rodney James Tadashi Yano, Air Cavalry Troops, 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment, US Army, made the supreme sacrifice of his life during a firefight near Bien Hao, South Vietnam, on January 1, 1969. Despite being exposed to withering small arms and antiaircraft fire on his helicopter, Crew Chief Yano (a native of Kealakekua, Kona, Hawaii, born on December 13, 1943) returned the fire and marked enemy positions with smoke and white phosphorous grenades. One of the grenades exploded prematurely, covering him with burning phosphorous and leaving him mortally wounded. Other ammunition supplies in the helicopter caught fire and began to explode. Despite having the use of only one arm, partially blinded, and suffering from additional wounds, Yano began throwing the blazing ammunition from the helicopter until the danger passed. His "conspicuous gallantry at the cost of his life" saved the lives of and averted further injury to his crew members. His family received his posthumously awarded Medal of Honor from President Richard Nixon at the White House on April 7, 1970.

This calendar celebrates and commemorates the achievements and activities of Asian and Pacific Island Americans between 1781 and 1997. It lists the achievements and activities of representatives of many nationalities from most parts of Asia and the Pacific Islands.

Specialists in the field of ethnic studies note that the terms Asian American or Pacific Island American are self-selecting and inclusive of broad categories of people. They are also unifying terms. Whereas persons of Asian or Pacific Island origin have long called themselves Chinese American, Japanese American, Indian American (or American of Indian descent), Laotian American, Samoan American, and many other bi-national or bi-ethnic combinations, they are also quite likely to identify themselves as Asian or Pacific Island Americans as a broader category giving them a larger place in American society.

The 1990 Census of the United States reported that 3 percent (7,273,662) of the population had identified themselves as Asian or Pacific Island Americans. Of this total, the largest groups were identified as Chinese (23 percent), Filipino (19 percent), Japanese (12 percent), Asian Indian (11 percent), Korean (11 percent), and Vietnamese (8 percent). In descending order—all less than 2 percent—were Hawaiians, Laotians, Cambodians, Thai, Hmong, Guamanians, Samoans, and "other" Asian and Pacific Island Americans. Between 1900 (204,472 individuals) and 1960 (877,934 individuals), there had been only modest growth in the Asian and Pacific Island American population. By 1970, however, the population had grown to 1.4 million; it increased to more than 3.5 million by 1980, and reached nearly 7.3 million by 1990. The highest percentage (58.5 percent) of Asian and Pacific Island residents in 1990 lived in the Western states, and the vast majority (94 percent) lived in urban areas (each with 200,000 or more Asian and Pacific Island residents), with the largest concentrations in the Los Angeles, New York, Honolulu, San Francisco, San Jose, Anaheim, Chicago, and Washington, DC metropolitan areas.

Notable Americans of Asian and Pacific Island birth and descent are noted throughout the calendar, which aims to show the diversity, breadth, and depth of the Asian and Pacific Islander experience in the United States. The notable achievements of Asians and Pacific Islanders in many walks of life in America are reported, typically in relation to the person's date of birth or date of his or her particular achievement. Sports figures, philanthropists, politicians, government officials, architects, artists, photographers, writers, poets, astronauts, military personnel, community activists, religious leaders, business entrepreneurs, farmers, educators, librarians, lawyers, judges, law enforcement professionals, actors and actresses, musicians, rap artists, martial arts specialists, scientists, fashion models, beauty pageant winners, and others are listed. In developing the calendar, a special emphasis was placed on finding Asian and Pacific Islanders who had served in the United States Armed Forces. The Army, Air Force, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard are represented in the calendar. Nine of the military personnel listed earned the nation's highest military honor, the Medal of Honor, some of them at the cost of their lives. According to the Defense Manpower Data Center, as of September 30, 1997, there were 46,534 Asian and Pacific Island Americans on active duty between E-1 and O-9. This number represented 3.2 percent of all Armed Forces personnel. In the 1990s, there usually have been more Filipinos (68.7 percent) than any other group serving on active duty. Koreans (6.1 percent), Japanese (5.4 percent), Chinese (3.5 percent), Vietnamese (3 percent), and "others" (13.4 percent) comprise the balance of the Asian and Pacific Island Americans in the Armed Forces.

Not everything mentioned in the listing of day-by-day events represents something positive. Individuals of Asian and Pacific Island origins have encountered difficulties in living in American society.

Certain of these occurrences, some of which brought hardship, injury, and even death, are listed in the calendar. The calendar also includes Federal and other holidays.

Most people listed in the calendar are Asian and Pacific Island Americans—persons who immigrated to the United States or were born here. A few persons mentioned in the calendar are of Asian or Pacific Island birth and, while they did not become American by residence or citizenship, they have had a lasting influence on Asian and Pacific Island heritage in the United States and, sometimes, on American society and culture in general. Similarly, certain Asian and Pacific Island innovations and forms of entertainment that have been adopted into American popular culture and daily life have been included. Thus, the users of the calendar will find mention of "Sailor Moon," "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers," pachinko, Tamagocchi "virtual pets," Cantopop, and other phenomena. Those who want to learn more about these developments should consult the bibliography and the supplementary readings at the end of the calendar. World Wide Web sources are listed. Calendar users who want to become more familiar with Asian and Pacific Island American literature or films featuring Asian and Pacific Island Americans can scan the calendar for book and film titles and other information associated with authors or artists. Searches of on-line catalogs will bring forth the rest of the desired bibliographic or cinegraphic information.

This calendar was compiled for the Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute under an Interagency Agreement with the Library of Congress. The compiler of the calendar wishes to thank members of the Library of Congress staff and the Library of Congress Asian American Association for assistance and suggestions in finding materials to develop the day-by-day entries, monthly photographs, and bibliographic sources used throughout the calendar.

COVER ART for the calendar was reproduced from a watercolor painting commissioned for the 1976 American Bicentennial to commemorate the role of Asian Americans in United States history. Entitled "442 Combat Team at Leghorn," the painting captures a defining moment in Asian American and Japanese American history—participation in World War II, in which more than 33,000 Japanese Americans served in the US Armed Forces. Many members of the all-Japanese American 442d Regimental Combat Team, 100th Infantry Battalion, 34th Infantry Division, 5th US Army, had been released from wartime relocation camps to join the war effort. The members of the 442d demonstrated their patriotism and courage during their service in Italy and France by winning I Medal of Honor, 52 Distinguished Service Crosses. I Distinguished Service Medal, 560 Silver Stars plus 28 Oak Leaf Clusters, 22 Legions of Merit, 15 Soldier's Medals, 4,000 Bronze Stars with 1,200 Oak Leaf Clusters, 9,486 Purple Hearts, and 18,143 individual decorations for personal valor. The 442d thus became the most decorated unit in American military history. The original art work was painted by Dong Moy Shu Kingman (Tsang King-man), a Chinese American born in Oakland, California, on April 11, 1911. Kingman is an acclaimed international artist whose works are represented in major art museums throughout the United States. He has also illustrated several books and produced artwork for several films. Courtesy U.S. Army Center of Military History, Catalog Number W.11.1.76.
