The argument that changing flight paths will result in fewer delays at the airport is asinine. So what if people have to wait a few minutes to depart or arrive, does that justify disrupting the lives of thousands of taxpaying citizens of Las Vegas? Ruining our way of life to satisfy a group of bureaucrats is out of the question. How many of the FAA employees live under a flight path? I'll bet it would be a different story if planes were flying over their neighborhoods.

The only sensible solution to the problem is to build a new airport at an area away from the city. I know it would be a major expense and a huge undertaking, but it is the only solution. McCarron is too small to handle Jumbo Jets and a new airport would allow for larger planes and fewer flights. Please fight this proposal!
