

We recently experienced a serious local weather condition. Our broadcasters were awake all night, putting themselves in harm's way, to calm our listeners' fears and provide accurate weather information. No satellite radio could provide this service.

We currently employ 5 broadcasters. If the satellite trend is permitted to expand, employment will be in jeopardy and our listeners would be removed from the close local ties they have with people they trust.

A merger should be denied. Let the "big guys" figure out how to pay for their bills the same way the small-market radio guys have to -- with excellent customer service and local concentration. If one mega company cannot do that task, a merger will not improve the situation.
