

NARA's FEDERAL RECORDS CENTERS – The Secure Choice

Rosemarie Weisz: This is a federal Records Center – part of the National Archives and Records Administration – we store records for agencies of the federal government.

David Weinberg: We have records centers around the country. We are the single largest provider to the federal workforce.

Leanne Townshend-Cerame: It is cheaper to store records with us than it is in their office environment

Barbara Byers: The federal records centers have a commitment to help federal agencies manage those records regardless of what media they're created on.

Karen Shaw: Because we are government, our federal customers look to us for that expertise

Kenneth Ragland: It's definitely easy to do business with the records centers. We'll help you and your agency with records management solutions.

Delphine Best: Their staff members seem to be eager to help – and to educate in the way of records. You can't beat the customer service with the federal records center.