Uganda – Complex Emergency

Situation Report #1, Fiscal Year (FY) 2004 (Revised)

October 21, 2003

BACKGROUND

Armed conflict in northern and eastern Uganda combined with violent looting and cattle raids by Karamojong pastoralists in the East have resulted in high numbers of internally displaced persons (IDPs), creating Uganda's worst humanitarian crisis in 17 years. More than 1.2 million people were displaced as of September 30, 2003, according to the U.N. World Food Program (WFP). Ongoing conflict has threatened food security, even in typically productive agricultural areas, and insecurity has undermined the effective delivery of humanitarian assistance.

Since 1986, the Lord's Resistance Army (LRA), led by Joseph Kony, has waged an insurgency in northern Uganda, primarily using southern Sudan as a base for attacks on government forces and civilians. According to the U.N. Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (UN OCHA), LRA attacks have displaced more than 80 percent of the ethnic Acholi population in Gulu, Kitgum, and Pader districts. During the conflict, the LRA has abducted more than 20,000 children for the purposes of forced conscription and sexual exploitation. Prior to April 2002, northern Uganda enjoyed 18 months of relative stability. However, continued LRA attacks and improving relations between Uganda and Sudan, led the Government of Uganda (GOU) to launch 'Operation Iron Fist' in March 2002. Under an agreement with the Government of Sudan (GOS), the GOU sent 10,000 Uganda Peoples Defense Forces (UPDF) troops to disable the LRA's camps in southern Sudan. As a result of this operation, LRA forces have entered northern and eastern Uganda, attacking villages and camps and creating a humanitarian emergency.

CURRENT SITUATION

Peace process remains stalled, LRA attacks continue.

After a brief, geographically limited cease-fire in March 2003, hostilities resumed in April following unsuccessful attempts at negotiation. According to international media, the LRA has rejected a GOU amnesty offer and continues to attack IDP camps. On September 12, the GOU renewed its 'Operation Iron Fist' agreement with the GOS, extending by three months its ability to carry out operations against the LRA in southern Sudan.

Since the end of the cease-fire, the LRA has become more violent and has extended its attacks beyond the usual northern zones of conflict. In June, the LRA began to attack villages and IDP camps south and east of the Acholi Region, including Apac, Lira, Kaberamaido, Katakwi, and Soroti districts of Langi and Teso regions. In addition, LRA attacks have extended to Adjumani and Moyo districts in the northwestern West Nile Region and Kotido District in northeastern Karamoja Region.

Number of IDPs increases in Acholi and Teso regions. In the Acholi Region, where fighting has displaced more than 80 percent of the population, WFP is providing food to 416,254 IDPs in Gulu District, 233,883 IDPs in Kitgum District, and 229,115 IDPs in Pader District. In the Teso Region, LRA attacks have displaced 305,899 residents since June, according to USAID/OFDA field reports. The total number of IDPs is 159,533 in Katakwi, 92,321 in Soroti, 35,039 in Kaberamaido, and 19,006 in Kumi. The IDPs have either been absorbed by local households or have settled in public areas including schools, hospitals, and churches. Soroti officials have recently received GOU permission to establish a new IDP camp. However, the new camp capacity is limited to 10,000 inhabitants.

Effects of LRA attacks on children.

An estimated 20,000 children have been abducted in the course of the 17-year civil war, with the rate of kidnappings increasing since June 2002. According to U.N. estimates, 8,400 children have been abducted in LRA raids between June 2002 and June 2003. An additional 2,000 children have been abducted since July, of whom an estimated 1,280 have been recovered by the GOU.

An estimated 13,000 and 7,000 "night-stayers" in Gulu and Kitgum, respectively, commute to sleep within the security provided by the city limits. According to an international NGO, the number of night-stayers in Gulu town tripled between February and May 2003. The majority of night-stayers are children who walk up to 10 km to seek refuge from the threat of LRA abductions. However, many lack shelter and must sleep in the open, increasing the risk of abuse and sexual exploitation. USAID/OFDA is concerned about this development and continues to monitor the situation.

Since January 2003, an estimated 4,000 displaced children have fled LRA attacks in Pader District, and remain stranded in the neighboring Karamoja Region. Many are enrolled in local schools and receive food from WFP. Due to the insecure environment, children cannot reunite with family members.

Insecurity restricts humanitarian access in the North.

Access to IDPs in the Acholi and Teso regions remains restricted due to LRA attacks. Humanitarian deliveries are frequently ambushed. In August, the LRA ambushed three supply trucks carrying WFP food from the Katakwi District in Teso to the northeastern district of Moroto in Karamoja. UPDF military escorts are used when transporting and distributing food assistance. In addition, the Karamoja region remains insecure. In April, Karamojong warriors ambushed and fired on a World Vision International (WVI) vehicle in the Karamoja Region, killing a staff member.

Food security deteriorates in northern Uganda.

Until early 2002, many residents in IDP camps maintained access to their farming plots. However, the resurgence in LRA violence has limited agricultural activities. The LRA has targeted IDP camps, ambushed road traffic, and looted or burned many crops, thus increasing food insecurity. Pader District has been especially affected by LRA rebel activity, and WFP has only been able to conduct a limited amount of food distributions to the IDP camps since April 2003. In June 2003, conflict spread to the Teso Region, and more than 300,000 residents fled their villages and fields. Under a USAID/OFDA grant, the Ugandan Red Cross provided immediate assistance of non-food items to IDPs in Soroti District, Teso Region. On September 29, WFP began to distribute food to the displaced Teso Region residents. USAID/OFDA and USAID/Uganda continue to monitor the situation.

On September 11, USAID's Famine Early Warning System (FEWS NET) reported that IDPs in northern and eastern Uganda face moderate to high food insecurity. Low production in early 2003 has increased the risk of food insecurity and diminished the likelihood of any improvement in food access during the next four to six months. WFP anticipates a shortfall of 18,000 metric tons (MT) of cereals and 9,000 MT of pulses from October through December 2003. To meet the shortfall, WFP has called forward 10,000 MT of corn and 2,500 MT of peas from USAID/FFP. After other international contributions, WFP anticipates that the remaining cereal shortfall will be approximately 10,000 MT. WFP is completing an Emergency Food Needs Assessment (EFNA) including an assessment of IDPs' coping mechanisms and may adjust ration levels based on the EFNA results.

Improved harvests, violence in Karamoja Region.

After two years of severe drought, the northeastern Karamoja Region received rain in May 2003. A FEWS NET assessment team determined that the region received near normal, well-distributed rainfall. The rains have improved livestock conditions and food security. FEWS NET concluded that the region may not require emergency food assistance, but WFP will continue target feeding programs for school children and hospitals. Incidents of cattle rustling, looting, raping, and killing among the Karamojong and with neighboring ethnic groups have continued. On September 20, a Karamojong cattle raid killed 31 people, most from the Ngariam IDP camp in Katakwi. Due to the insecurity, WFP is the only international organization with a significant presence in the Karamoja Region.

Deteriorating health situation in eastern Uganda. In eastern Uganda, the increasing number of IDPs has overwhelmed the capacity of local relief organizations to respond, triggering a health crisis. Crowded IDP camps with inadequate water and sanitation facilities have led to poor health among IDPs. Where schools double as IDP housing, illnesses quickly spread to students and local residents.

According to USAID/OFDA field reports, most doctors in Kumi and Soroti districts face drug shortages. In late August, doctors exhausted medicine necessary to cure easily treatable diseases. Malaria, measles, diarrhea, and pneumonia kill a number of children on a daily basis. Drug shortages have occurred, and the Ministry of Health (MOH) has not increased normal drug stock allotments since LRA attacks began in June.

The presence of thousands of IDPs living in local schools has disrupted education for students in Teso Region. Meanwhile, most IDP students lack access to educational services. In Soroti District, the school system has absorbed only 5,000 out of an estimated 15,000 IDP students.

Relocation of Sudanese refugees creates difficulties.

In early September, the GOU relocated approximately 16,000 Sudanese refugees from the congested Kiryandongo Camp in Masindi to the West Nile settlements of Madi Okollo and Ikafe, in Arua and Yumbe districts, respectively. According to international press reports, the new camps lack adequate schools and sanitation facilities. On September 28, the UNHCR began the process of reuniting 448 Sudanese minors that were separated from their families during the relocation.

Rwandan refugees to return home.

On August 4, the GOU announced plans to repatriate Rwandan refugees following an agreement with the Government of Rwanda and UNHCR. The repatriation is scheduled to begin on November 1, 2003.

USG HUMANITARIAN ASSISTANCE

On October 1, 2003, U.S. Ambassador Jimmy Kolker redeclared a disaster in response to the ongoing complex humanitarian emergency in northern Uganda. In response to the humanitarian crisis during FY 2003, USAID/OFDA provided nearly $4 million in emergency humanitarian assistance to Uganda. USAID/OFDA is providing assistance in the emergency health and nutrition and water and sanitation sectors to conflict-affected areas of Uganda. In response to security and access concerns, USAID/OFDA provided $300,000 to UN OCHA during FY 2003 to enhance coordination efforts among the humanitarian relief community and to establish an office in Kitgum. During FY 2004, USAID/OFDA plans to increase levels of assistance to respond to the escalating humanitarian crisis in Uganda. The rising number of IDPs, restricted access to agricultural land and livelihoods, and intensifying LRA attacks in northern and eastern Uganda compound already critical emergency needs.

USAID/Uganda's strategic interventions in the northern and western districts of Uganda aim to mitigate the impact of conflict and increase community resilience through humanitarian and relief-to-development assistance. USAID/Uganda's $16 million Community Resilience and Dialogue (CRD) activity, from September 2002 through 2007, assists conflict victims, including communities living under the threat of attack, families that have moved to IDP camps, current and former abductees, and ex-combatants who have received amnesty. To achieve a permanent solution, USAID/Uganda has launched a new initiative to secure a negotiated settlement with the LRA.

In FY 2003, USAID's Office of Food for Peace (USAID/FFP) provided to Uganda 102,160 MT of P.L. 480 Title II emergency food assistance valued at more than $58 million. These commodities included maize, corn-soy blend, vegetable oil, and pulses.

The Department of State's Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration (State/PRM) continues to support the humanitarian needs of refugees in the region through funding to UNHCR, WFP, the International Federation of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC), and NGOs. In FY 2003, State/PRM has provided $3.2 million to UNHCR for assistance to refugees in Uganda, support for environmental programs and refugee children's programs. State/PRM also contributed $170,000 to the IFRC to provide assistance to Rwandan and Congolese refugees in Uganda. Other State/PRM funding includes $2.4 million to WFP, more than $519,000 to Lutheran World Relief (LWR), and $246,000 to International Medical Corps.
