SUBJECT: Development of the Inventory Database of Potential Other Solid Waste Incinerators (OSWI)

1.0 INTRODUCTION

This memorandum describes the development of the inventory database of potential Other Solid Waste Incinerators (OSWI) for use in the development of New Source Performance Standards (NSPS) and Emission Guidelines (EG) for this source category.

It should be noted that the database included various types of units that are not regulated under the large or small Municipal Waste Combustors (MWC), Hospital/Medical and Infectious Waste Incinerator (HMIWI) or Commercial and Industrial Solid Waste Incinerator (CISWI) rules already developed under Section 129 of the Clean Air Act. The types of units that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) may consider for regulation under OSWI are listed in previous Federal Register notices 58 FR 31358, 58 FR 58498 and 65 FR 67357. Based on further information gathering, EPA may determine that not all types of units should be regulated at this time under Section 129. Future Federal Register notices will document any further decisions on the scope of OSWI regulation.

This memorandum discusses the sources of data used in the development of the database, the methodology and assumptions applied to compile the different data sources, and the methodology for identifying and removing units which are not included in the source category or will not be affected by this standard. The following is a list of sections within this memorandum:

Section 2.0	Sources and types of data in the inventory database
Section 3.0	Identification of data and compilation of data sources
Section 4.0	Modifications to the inventory database
Section 5.0	Results
Section 6.0	References

2.0 SOURCES AND TYPES OF DATA IN THE INVENTORY DATABASE

2.1 Data Sources

The first portion of the inventory database was developed using the Commercial and Industrial Solid Waste Incinerators/Other Solid Waste Incinerators (CISWI/OSWI) database. The data sources and development of the CISWI/OSWI database are described in the memorandum Other Solid Waste Incineration (OSWI) Units: Industry Description, Subcategorization and Growth.¹

The second portion of the inventory database was developed by using the Very Small Municipal Waste Combustors (VSMWC) database. The development of the Very Small Municipal Waste Combustors database is described in the memorandum Overview of the Very Small MWC Inventory Database.²

The third portion of the inventory database was developed extracting data from the 1999 National Emissions Inventory database. The development of the National Emissions Inventory is explained in Documentation for the 1999 Base Year Point Source National Emissions Inventory for Hazardous Air Pollutants (Version 3).³

The final portion of the inventory database was developed using five different sources of information on pathological waste and human and animal cremation. This information was obtained from HMIWI project data, the International Association of Pet Cemeteries (IAPC), the Association of Pet Loss and Bereavement (APLB), the Cremation Association of North America (CANA), and the Georgia Department of Agriculture.

2.2 Types of Data in the Potential Other Solid Waste Incinerators Inventory database

The final inventory database is a relational database that contains data for 3,868 unique incinerators located at 2,034 different facilities. Data are grouped into tables according to whether the data are site-specific, unit-specific, process-specific, period-specific, emissions-specific, emission release point-specific or control device-specific. Table 1 shows each table in the inventory database, the information each contains and the key fields.

Table 1. Inventory Data Tables

3.0 IDENTIFICATION OF DATA AND COMPILATION OF DATA SOURCES

3.1 Identification of OSWI and VSMWC Data

3.1.1 Other Solid Waste Incinerators Data from the CISWI/OSWI Database

The EPA developed an Industrial Combustion Coordinated Rulemaking (ICCR) Inventory database for combustion devices located in the United States. The database was developed using the Aerometric Information Retrieval System (AIRS) database, the Ozone Transport Assessment Group (OTAG) database, 17 state databases, the Department of Defense (DOD) database, and the Commercial and Industrial Solid Waste Incinerators/Other Solid Waste Incinerators (CISWI/OSWI) database. In order to obtain more detailed and current information for incinerators in the ICCR Inventory database, burning certain types of waste and non-fossil materials, the EPA issued an Information Collection Request (ICR). Using the information collected from the ICR, a database called ICCR Survey was developed. In 1998, after rigorous analysis of the ICCR Inventory database and the ICCR Survey database, the CISWI/OSWI database was developed. The CISWI/OSWI database contains data for commercial and industrial solid waste incinerators (CISWI) and other solid waste incinerators (OSWI). The CISWI/OSWI database comprises 706 incinerators. CISWI units account for 122 of these incinerators and OSWI units account for the remaining 584 incinerators. The 584 units consists of crematories and other pathological incinerators. The OSWI portion of this database, created in 1999, is documented in Attachment 1 and has been included in the current Other Solid Waste Incinerators inventory database.

3.1.2 Very Small Municipal Waste Data from the VSMWC Database

A very small municipal waste combustor (VSMWC) is a combustion unit that fires at least 30 percent municipal solid waste (MSW) and has the capacity to fire less than 35 tons of MSW per day. The VSMWC database was produced in 1998 by querying the ICCR Survey database for all combustion units burning trash, rubbish, refuse, garbage, refuse derived fuel, industrial waste, and other solid waste. If the data did not meet the definition of a VSMWC (e.g., due to the percent MWC or the unit capacity) or if the facility had "hospital" in the plant name field it was removed from this database. The resulting VSMWC database contains data for 299 units at 243 facilities and is documented in Attachment 2. This data has been included in the current Other Solid Waste Incinerators inventory database.

3.1.3 Data from the National Emissions Inventory

The National Emissions Inventory (NEI) was developed by EPA's Emission Factor and Inventory Group (EFIG). The NEI contains data for all criteria pollutants and hazardous air pollutants for all of the United States. The OSWI and VSMWC data from the draft 1999 NEI database was found by querying the database using all incineration source classification codes (SCC). These source classification codes are included in Attachment 3 with the corresponding text descriptions of each. Sources that did not have a SCC or had the miscellaneous SCC 39999999 were searched using keywords. The keywords identified 64 additional units and included path, crem, type 4, animal remains, and human.

3.1.4 Data from the HMIWI Project

EPA developed a database for the Hospital/Medical and Infectious Waste Incineration (HMIWI) rule. During review of the HMIWI inventory database, EPA discovered some incinerators that were exempt from the HMIWI rule and could possibly be OSWI units. The EPA forwarded this list to ERG so these units could be added to the OSWI inventory database. The information that was added to the OSWI database included site IDs, names, addresses, and capacities. After the addition of these units, the database was checked for duplication and any duplicates were eliminated. This list resulted in 356 facilities being added to the OSWI inventory database.

3.1.5 Data from the International Association of Pet Cemeteries

The International Association of Pet Cemeteries (IAPC) is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to the advancement of pet cemeteries. The IAPC web site contains a list with the names and addresses of all of the IAPC members in the United States. A contact person for the IAPC (see telephone call record in Attachment 4) said that approximately 90% of the pet cemeteries listed on their web site have a crematory. The IAPC list was copied and converted into database format and added to the OSWI database. The database was checked for duplicates. This list resulted in 137 facilities being added to the OSWI inventory database.

3.1.6 Data from the Association of Pet Loss and Bereavement

The Association of Pet Loss and Bereavement (APLB) is a non-profit organization dedicated to helping those who lose companion animals. The APLB web site contains a list with the names and addresses of all of the APLB members in the United States which operate crematories or cemeteries. However, because there is no indication of which members have crematories, the entire list was retained. The APLB list was copied and converted into database format and added to the OSWI database. The database was checked for duplicates. This list resulted in 69 facilities being added to the OSWI inventory database.

3.1.7 Data from the Cremation Association of North America

The Cremation Association of North America (CANA) submitted a list of members and some nonmembers of which they are aware. The list only included names and addresses. It has been included as attachment 5. The CANA list was converted into database format and added to the OSWI database. The database was checked for duplicates. This list resulted in 1,224 facilities being added to the OSWI inventory database. Discussions with CANA staff indicated that not all of the facilities actually operated crematories. However, the majority of them did, in fact, operate a crematory and there was no information available to indicate which ones did. A search was performed looking for terms like “crematory” or “crematorium” in the facility names. This was found to exclude some known crematories and significantly underestimated the number of crematories in the list. Therefore, all facilities were included in the OSWI inventory database.

3.1.8 Data from the Georgia Department of Agriculture

The Georgia Department of Agriculture submitted a list of sources that use incineration for poultry farm mortality disposal. This list only included names and addresses. The list has been included as attachment 6. The list was converted into database format and was added to the OSWI database. The database was checked for duplicates. This list resulted in 635 sources being added to the OSWI inventory database. Information on the number of units, capacity, operation rates or control equipment is unavailable.

3.2 Compilation of OSWI, VSMWC, and NEI Data Sources

3.2.1 Compilation of CISWI/OSWI and VSMWC Data

The CISWI/OSWI and VSMWC databases are very similar in structure because they were developed from the ICCR Inventory and Survey databases. The CISWI/OSWI and VSMWC databases divide the information into eight tables: (1) General Facility table, (2) Air Pollution Control Device table, (3) Economics table, (4) Emission Test Data table, (5) HAP Data table, (6) Inventory table, (7) Materials Combusted table, and (8) Information table. Since these two databases were so similar the OSWI data from the CISWI/OSWI database and the VSMWC database were combined to make one portion of the OSWI inventory database.

3.2.2 Compilation of OSWI, VSMWC, and NEI Data

The NEI database is structured differently than the CISWI/OSWI and VSMWC databases. The NEI database divides the information into seven tables: Site table, Emission Unit table, Emission Release Point table, Emission Process table, Control Equipment table, Emission Period table, and Emission table. Because the NEI database structure contains a logical and nearly complete format for an incinerator population list, its format was selected for the OSWI population database. After merging CISWI/OSWI and VSMWC data into the NEI data structure by mapping it to the appropriate NEI tables, three additional tables were added to avoid losing data that did not fit in the NEI structure. These tables included the Economics table, Emission Test Data table and HAP Data table. This conglomeration of CISWI/OSWI, VSMWC and NEI information became the initial OSWI inventory database. The additional information obtained from the HMIWI project, IAPC, APLB, CANA, and the Georgia Department of Agriculture was filled into the appropriate tables. However, all of these sources except the HMIWI data, provided only general facility information such as addresses. No additional combustion unit technical data resulted from these submittals.

4.0 MODIFICATIONS TO THE INVENTORY DATABASE

4.1 Identification and Removal of Units

The OSWI inventory database was reviewed to identify units that should not be included in the Other Solid Waste Incinerators category. Units in the inventory database covered by other rules (e.g., industrial/commercial/institutional boilers and utility boilers) were removed from the OSWI inventory database. Likewise, other types of units that are not solid waste incinerators were removed from the inventory database, such as open burning, groundwater stripping units, and flares. Soil remediation units were removed to a separate database pending further investigation into other rules to which they may be subject. In addition, several units located at manufacturing facilities were moved, pending further information gathering to determine if they fall into the CISWI or OSWI category.

5.0 RESULTS

The final Potential Other Solid Waste Incinerators inventory database contains data for 3,628 unique incinerators located at 1,864 different facilities. The database may be found in the OSWI docket (OAR-2004-XXXX).

SUBJECT: Commercial and Industrial Solid Waste Incineration (CISWI) Units: Industry Description, Subcategorization and Growth

1.0 INTRODUCTION

Section 129 of the Clean Air Act requires the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to develop New Source Performance Standards (NSPS) and Emission Guidelines (EG) for four categories of incineration units. These are municipal solid waste (MSW) combustors, hospital and medical infectious waste incinerators (HMIWIs), commercial and industrial solid waste incineration (CISWI) units, and other solid waste incineration (OSWI) units. An incinerator in the CISWI and OSWI categories is an enclosed device that uses controlled flame combustion to combust solid waste and does not incorporate heat recovery as an integral part of its design.

Regulations addressing MSW combustors (40 CFR 60 Subparts Cb and Eb) and HMIWIs (40 CFR 60 Subparts Ce and Ec) have been promulgated. However, the MSW combustor rule does not apply to units combusting less than 250 tons per day (tpd) of MSW (determined by weight on a quarterly average basis), or larger units combusting less than 30 percent MSW. The HMIWI rule does not apply to units burning less than 10 percent hospital and medical infectious wastes. The EPA has decided to address the units combusting less than 250 tpd of MSW in a separate rulemaking. Units combusting less than 30 percent MSW and incineration units burning less than 10 percent hospital and medical infectious waste will be classified, along with incinerators burning numerous other waste types, as CISWI or OSWI units for the purposes of those rulemakings.

The CISWI and OSWI rulemakings were considered by the Industrial Combustion Coordinated Rulemaking (ICCR) advisory committee chartered under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (FACA) from September 1996 through September 1998. The ICCR Federal Advisory Committee, known as the Coordinating Committee, formed Source Work Groups for the various combustor types covered under the ICCR. The Incinerator Work Group (IWG) researched issues related to the CISWI and OSWI units. The IWG submitted recommendations and other “works-in-progress,” such as data analyses, to the Coordinating Committee. After deliberation by the Coordinating Committee, the works-in-progress and data/information items were forwarded to EPA by the Committee as part of the FACA process. Some items were forwarded as consensus recommendations from the Committee. Others, which were incomplete or for which the Committee did not have time to develop recommendations, were forwarded as works-in-progress for EPA’s consideration, but not as formal recommendations.

Though the FACA charter has expired, EPA may still choose to use data or recommendations submitted before the charter expiration by the Coordinating Committee. EPA may also consider the works-in-progress and data information items forwarded by the Committee where appropriate. However, these works carry less weight than consensus recommendations from the Committee. This memorandum discusses how the EPA has considered and refined data and information provided by the ICCR Coordinating Committee to describe the CISWI source category and assess subcategorization and industry growth.

2.0 POPULATION ESTIMATES AND CHARACTERISTICS

The EPA compiled population data for incinerators across the United States from the Aerometric Information Retrieval System (AIRS) database, the Ozone Transport Assessment Group (OTAG) database, 17 State databases, the Department of Defense, and the Association of Metropolitan Sewage Agencies (AMSA). The resulting inventory database contains information on facilities believed to have one or more incineration units.

To obtain more detailed and up-to-date information the EPA issued an Information Collection Request (ICR) to facilities with incinerators identified in the inventory database as burning certain types of wastes or non-fossil materials. Incinerators burning MSW or medical waste were not surveyed because they are covered under other regulations. A database containing the information collected in the ICR was then created. This database, called Survey v.2, serves as the basis for the population estimates presented below.

After reviewing EPA's inventory database and the Survey v.2 database, the IWG initially determined that 1669 incinerators in the United States could be classified as CISWI or OSWI units. Further research and review led the IWG to conclude that 182 of these combustors did not qualify as CISWI or OSWI units; thus, they were eliminated from the data set, and the remaining 1487 combustors were presented to the Coordinating Committee. This database, hereafter called the CISWI/OSWI database, was then forwarded to EPA for consideration by the Coordinating Committee as a work-in-progress.

The CISWI/OSWI database was used as the starting point for further analysis. Figure 1 illustrates the following steps, which were used to review and refine the CISWI/OSWI database:

? Step 1: The CISWI/OSWI database was compared to the Survey v.2 database to complete the review begun by the IWG and to ensure that all incinerators were accounted for by a survey response.

Result: The comparison revealed that 580 of the combustors had either been shut down or were incorrectly classified as CISWI/OSWI units. Therefore, these units were removed from the CISWI/OSWI database. In addition, combustor identification numbers (IDs) for 323 of the units did not match combustor IDs for the same facilities in the Survey v.2 database. Most of the combustor IDs appear to have been derived from EPA's inventory database, which contains older and less complete information than the Survey v.2 database. Other possible reasons for this discrepancy cannot be clearly determined from the available data. As a result, these units were also removed from the database, but the corresponding facilities were considered further (see Step 3 below).

? Step 2: Evaluate data for the 584 incinerators left in the CISWI/OSWI database to catch remaining MSW combustors, HMIWIs and duplicate entries.

Result: Fifteen duplicate records were discovered and deleted. Thirty-two combustors were identified as MSW combustors or HMIWIs and were eliminated from the CISWI/OSWI database.

? Step 3: The 323 combustors with incorrect IDs (see Step 1) are associated with facilities represented in the Survey v.2 database. Thus, the Survey v.2 database was queried to identify incinerators at those facilities that could be classified as CISWI/OSWI units.

Result: Queries identified 100 incinerators that were not included in the work-in-progress forwarded to EPA by the Coordinating Committee. These 100 incinerators were added to the CISWI/OSWI database.

? Step 4: Responses to EPA's ICR that were received after the Survey v.2 database was compiled were reviewed to identify additional CISWI and OSWI units.

Result: An additional 149 incinerators were identified and added to the CISWI/OSWI database.

? Step 5: Parts, racks, and drums burn-off units will be considered separately from the CISWI and OSWI rulemakings and were, therefore, separated from the database.

Result: Eighty burn-off units were removed from the CISWI/OSWI database and put into a separate data set.

As shown in Figure 1, the CISWI/OSWI database, which is considered to be representative of the CISWI/OSWI population in the United States, now comprises 706 incinerators. Human crematories and pathological waste incinerators account for 584 of these units, and the remaining 122 are a diverse group of combustors incinerating a variety of commercial and industrial solid wastes. The crematories and pathological incinerators are more numerous than units burning all the other waste types combined. In addition, crematories and pathological incinerators tend to be similar in design, size and operation. As a result, these incinerators will be evaluated separately under the OSWI rulemaking, and the remaining incinerators will be evaluated under the CISWI rulemaking.

OSWI units are relatively consistent in design. Batch units dominate the population, accounting for 95% of the units. Most of the OSWI units (96%) are smaller than 500 lbs/hr. Three out of four of all OSWI units fall in the 100 to 500 lb/hr range, which would be expected for human crematory and pathological units. Limited data are available for poultry farm burners, which are small incinerators (<100 lbs/hr) used to dispose of poultry carcasses. The database might not account for all the units in this sector, but data are not available to accurately determine the number in operation.

2.0 INDUSTRIES USING OSWI UNITS

OSWI units are not technically “industries” themselves, nor are they found exclusively in any one particular industry. Instead, OSWI units comprise a distinct regulatory category for incineration units that are found in many major industries. Examples of the types of industries and facilities that use OSWI units include:

- ? Crematories
- ? Poultry farms
- ? Veterinary centers
- ? Animal disposal systems for hospitals
- ? Animal control facilities
- ? Research facilities

Wastes that are typically burned in pathological incinerators include animal remains with associated bedding and containers.

4.0 SUBCATEGORIZATION

Categories are typically divided into subcategories when differences (e.g., design, fuel/waste type, etc.) between given types of units lead to corresponding differences in the technical feasibility of applying emission control techniques. The design and operating information reviewed to date for OSWI units does not indicate the need for subcategorization of this category. Waste type is relatively consistent over the design and size ranges, and waste type does not appear to determine the technical feasibility of control. Therefore, subcategorization of the OSWI category is not appropriate.

5.0 GROWTH TRENDS

Representatives of the industries potentially affected by the OSWI rulemaking participated in the ICCR FACA process and provided insight on expected trends in the OSWI population. These observations are discussed in the Regulatory Alternatives Paper (see Docket No. A-96-17) forwarded to EPA by the Coordinating Committee. On the whole, OSWI units should increase in number over coming years. For example, based on statistics from the Cremation Association of North America, the number of human cremations will increase at a rate of 4% per year until the year 2010. Because crematories account for most of the OSWI population, the OSWI category should see steady growth. However, the number of very small incinerators (<100 lbs/hr) could decrease as a result of alternate disposal methods, such as composting.

Overview of the Very Small MWC Inventory Database Memorandum

EASTERN RESEARCH GROUP, INC.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Walt Stevenson, EPA/Combustion Group

FROM: Stephanie Finn, Eastern Research Group, Inc., (ERG)

DATE: August 12, 1998

SUBJECT: Overview of the Very Small MWC Inventory Database

1.0 INTRODUCTION

An inventory of very small municipal waste combustors (MWCs) has been compiled to support the development of upcoming New Source Performance Standards and emission guidelines. A very small MWC is defined as a combustion unit that fires at least 30 percent municipal solid waste (MSW) and has the capacity to fire no more than 35 tons per day (tpd) of MSW.

The very small MWC category of combustion devices was originally included in the Industrial Combustion Coordinated Rulemaking (ICCR). To fill in some significant data gaps within the ICCR inventory database, a survey was developed to obtain more detailed information about several types of combustion devices. Responses to this survey were reviewed for potential inclusion in the very small MWC category. Those facilities meeting the definition of very small MWCs (greater than 30 percent MSW, less than 35 tpd) have been included in an inventory for very small MWCs, separate from the overall ICCR inventory. Details of the ICCR database development, the ICCR survey process, and the very small MWC inventory are provided below.

2.0 BACKGROUND OF THE ICCR

Under Sections 111, 112, and 129 of the Clean Air Act, EPA is required to develop or review regulations for a variety of combustion sources including industrial boilers, commercial/institutional boilers, process heaters, industrial/commercial waste incinerators, other solid waste incinerators, other solid waste combustion devices, stationary gas turbines, and stationary internal combustion engines. The EPA established the Industrial Combustion Coordinated Rulemaking (ICCR) as a comprehensive means of developing a set of unified Federal air emissions regulations for these sources while avoiding duplicative and burdensome regulatory requirements. An advisory committee was set up under the Federal Advisory Committee Act (FACA) and several Work Groups were established to provide stakeholder involvement in regulatory development. Work Group members were drawn from industry, government, academia, trade associations, and environmental groups. One Work Group was established for each of the combustion sources covered by ICCR: boilers, process heaters, incinerators, turbines, and engines.

3.0 ICCR INVENTORY DATABASE

The ICCR Inventory database was developed to estimate the number of facilities and combustion devices that exist in each source category and to provide information on the design characteristics and existing control technologies for these devices. This database was compiled from the following databases:

- ? Aerometric Information Retrieval System (AIRS);
- ? Ozone Transport Assessment Group (OTAG);
- ? 17 state databases;
- ? the Industrial and Commercial Waste Incinerators (ICWI) and the Other Solid Waste Incinerators (OSWI) database; (developed by EPA in earlier investigations of these source categories by obtaining lists from selected states and combustor vendors); and

? a database supplied by the Department of Defense (DOD).

The states providing data were: California, Florida, Illinois, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia, and Wisconsin.

The state data were generally more recent and more complete than data from AIRS or OTAG, and therefore were given precedence when data for the same facilities existed in both databases. However, the states' databases were not equally comprehensive. Some contained information on a much broader range of combustion units than other state databases.

The Inventory database was released in three versions. Each update represents revisions in response to quality assurance efforts and the addition of new data sets. The latest version, ICCR Inventory v 3.0, contained information for 45,039 facilities and 151,671 combustion units.

4.0 ICCR SURVEY

In June of 1997, an Information Collection Request "The Industrial Combustion Coordinated Rulemaking Questionnaire" was mailed to 11,983 facilities which operated boilers, process heaters, incinerators, and landfill gas flares that combusted materials other than fossil fuels. Initially, EPA developed this questionnaire, or survey, in response to a court order to develop regulations for industrial and commercial waste incinerators under Section 129. This survey was broadened to accommodate other non-fossil fuel fired units covered by ICCR. Addresses for most of these facilities were obtained from the ICCR Inventory database (Docket A-96-17, Item 11-C-13). The American Public Works Association (APWA) provided 2,335 of the 11,983 addresses. Data from this survey were entered into a database known as the ICCR Survey Database.

The survey contained three parts. Part I asked the respondent to update the contact information for the facility and asked about the availability of Hazardous Air Pollutant (HAP) emission test data for all units located at the facility (fossil and non-fossil fired). Completion of Part I was mandatory. If the facility had a non-fossil fired combustion unit, the recipient was required to fill out Parts II and III as well. Part II contained questions about the combustion device, capacity, operating conditions, control information, fuels and wastes combusted, and the availability of specific HAP emission test data. Part III contained questions that dealt with the economic profile of each facility. For purposes of the very small MWC inventory, Part I and Part II are the important sections of the survey and are the primary focus of this memorandum.

The EPA received 7,657 completed surveys from the June 1997 mailing. The postal service returned 1,057 surveys as undeliverable. The remaining 3,269 facilities did not return the survey. Figure 1 illustrates the number of survey responses received and follow-up actions. Of the 7,657 completed surveys, 4,820 were returned with only Part I, and 2,837 were returned with Part II completed. Rationale for completing only Part I was provided by 2,169 facilities. The percentage of respondents completing Part II of the survey (37 percent of completed surveys) was much lower than expected since the facilities (except those from the APWA mailing list) came from the ICCR Inventory database and were expected to have at least one non-fossil fired combustion unit of interest. To better understand the low completion rate, follow-up phone calls were made to a sample population of the facilities that had only returned Part I of the survey. From the 2,651 Part I respondents that did not provide a rationale for completing only Part I, approximately 200 facilities were selected for follow-up. Calls were distributed proportionally across fuel/waste categories and randomly selected within these categories. The phone survey found that 80 percent of those completing only Part I had correctly interpreted the survey instructions. The respondents had not completed the survey for valid reasons including plant shutdown, unit closure, receipt of a duplicate survey, or combustion of an exempt fuel (e.g., natural gas).

In December of 1997, 3,269 surveys were mailed to non-respondents from the first mailing. From this second mailing, 2,114 responses were received; 1,601 of these responses contained only Part I and 513 surveys contained Part II. Of those only completing Part I, 702 facilities provided an explanation of the facility's exemption. The post office returned 146 surveys to sender. After this mailing, there were still 1,009 facilities from which no response had been received.

Overall, 81.5 percent (9,771 of 11,983) of the surveys were completed (Part I or Part II) and returned as a result of the two mailings. Recipients returned 6,421 Part I and 3,350 Part II. Only 8.4 percent of all surveys were not returned in either mailing (See Table 1).

^a Part I is general facility contact information.

Part II is detailed information on combustors firing non-fossil fuels/wastes.

A key finding was that only 28.0% returned the portion of the survey on non-fossil fired combustion units (Part II). The reasons provided in the surveys and the follow-up phone calls previously discussed indicated that the great majority of respondents who did not return Part II had valid reasons such as plant closings, the combustor was shut-down, or the combustor did not burn non-fossil materials of interest. Thus, there are fewer non-fossil combustors in operation than the ICCR Inventory database indicated.

While the ICCR Survey was the largest undertaken by EPA, it should be acknowledged that there are likely to be additional units in the U.S. not covered by this survey. Because many of these units are small, some may never have been permitted and may not be contained in the AIRS, OTAG, State, and ICWI/OSWI databases used to develop and identify survey recipients.

5.0 VERY SMALL MUNICIPAL WASTE COMBUSTORS

In the fall of 1997, EPA decided to pursue the rulemaking for the very small MWCs (VSMWCs) separately from the ICCR. This action was taken to provide consistency with regulations developed for MWCs units with capacities greater than 35 tpd.

Using information contained in the Inventory database, the Incinerator Work Group had identified 2,431 survey recipients as owners of potential VSMWCs. It had categorized all of the incinerators in the Inventory v 2.0 database by identifying useful fields and developing a list of search terms or keywords. These fields included plant description, plant name, Standard Industrial Classification (SIC), combustor description, capacity, capacity units, fuel type, source classification code (SCC), and waste description. Keywords included, “solid waste,” “municipal waste,” “municipal solid waste,” “incinerator,” “municipal waste combustor,” and “municipal waste combustion.” Additionally, relevant SCC and SIC codes were used to query the database. This electronic search was followed by a manual review of the categorized records.

From this set of 2,431 facilities, 1,017 had completed and returned survey responses in the first mailing. From these facilities containing VSMWCs, 828 of these filled out only Part I (general facility information), while 189 filled out Part II (detailed non-fossil combustor information) as well. The postal service returned 479 surveys as undeliverable. The remaining 935 surveys were not returned. The phone calls to facilities burning MSW which had only filled out Part I (as discussed in Section 4), revealed that 90 percent of potential VSMWC called correctly interpreted the survey instructions.

In the second mailing, 935 surveys were sent out to potential VSMWCs. From this group of 935 facilities, 404 completed Part I, while 80 respondents completed Part II as well. The postal service returned 45 surveys with inadequate address information, while 406 surveys reached their destination but were never returned to EPA (See Table 2.)

^a Part I is general contact information.

Part II is detailed information on combustors firing non-fossil fuels/wastes.

As with the overall survey effort, only a small percentage (11.1%) of potential VSMCWs completed Part II detailed information of a VSMWC.

To determine if a significant percentage of facilities that did not respond to the survey might have operational VSMWCs, additional phone calls were made to a subset of the 406 facilities in the Inventory database that were believed to have VSMWCs and had not responded. Information was received from 41 facilities. Only 25 percent (10 out of 41) of the facilities called had operating VSMWCs. At the remaining 75 percent, the unit had been shut down, was not an MWC, or there was no unit at the present time (see July 22, 1998 memorandum "Very Small Municipal Waste Combustors - Survey Non - Respondents"). This indicates that only a small percent of the 406 non-respondents would have a VSMWC. The overall conclusion is that there are many fewer operating VSMWCs than indicated in the ICCR Inventory database.

6.0 CONSTRUCTION OF VERY SMALL MWC DATABASE

Although the Inventory database had been categorized to indicate potential VSMWCs, the VSMWC database was constructed solely from data received from ICCR survey responses. The survey responses provide more current and more detailed information on currently operating non-fossil combustion units than the inventory database. The VSMWC database was produced by querying the database containing the ICCR survey responses for all combustion units burning one or more of the following materials (see attachment A for detailed definitions):

M0 - Municipal/Commercial Solid Waste Type 0 Trash

M1 - Municipal/Commercial Solid Waste Type 1 Rubbish

M2 - Municipal/Commercial Solid Waste Type 2 Refuse

M3 - Municipal/Commercial Solid Waste Type 3 Garbage

RF - Refuse Derived Fuel

Additionally, the descriptions for all materials coded as industrial waste (IW) or other solid waste (OS) were reviewed. These material codes were very general and it was thought that some respondents might have used one of these codes instead of the more specific ones listed above.

After this set of possible VSMWCs was compiled, records were removed if the unit combusted less than 30 percent MSW (if the percentage was not given, the record was not screened out), the design capacity exceeded 35 tpd, or the facility had "hospital" in the plant name field. These criteria eliminated small MWCs, large MWCs, and medical waste incinerators which are covered under separate rulemakings. In some cases, the capacity was not given by the respondent, was outside the believable range, needed clarification, or was close to the 35 tpd cutoff. Follow up phone calls were made to 45 facilities to obtain missing capacity information (see July 10, 1998 memorandum "Summary of Phone Calls to Very Small MWC Facilities with Incomplete Capacity Information"). The phone survey found that no combustion unit currently classified as a VSMWC combusted greater than 35 tpd and therefore no unit needed to be reclassified as a small MWC.

The resulting VSMWC database contained information for 231 facilities operating 271 combustion devices. The information contained in this database is believed to be representative of the total population of existing VSMWCs. The ICCR survey from which the VSMWC database was constructed was the largest information collection request ever undertaken by EPA. Two mailings were conducted to ensure a high response rate to the survey. Phone calls to facilities supported the results of the survey which indicated that the actual number of VSMWCs was much smaller than the number indicated in the ICCR Inventory database.

Attachment A: Municipal/Commercial Solid Waste, Types 0-3

- Type 0. Trash, a mixture of highly combustible waste such as paper, cardboard, cartons, wood boxes, and floor sweepings for commercial and industrial activities. The mixture contains up to 10 percent by weight of plastic bags, coated paper, laminated paper, treated corrugated cardboard, oily rags, and plastic or rubber scraps. This type of waste contains 10 percent moisture and 5 percent non-combustible solids, and has a heating value of 8,500 BTU per pound as fired.
- Type 1. Rubbish, a mixture of combustible waste such as paper, cardboard cartons, wood scrap, foliage, and floor sweepings from domestic, commercial, and industrial activities. The mixture contains up to 20 percent by weight of restaurant type waste, but contains little or no treated paper, plastic or rubber waste. This type of waste contains 25 percent moisture and 10 percent noncombustible solids, and has a heating value of 6,500 BTU per pound as fired.
- Type 2. Refuse, an approximately even mixture of rubbish and garbage by weight. This type of waste, common to apartment and residential occupancy, consists of up to 50 percent moisture and 7 percent noncombustible solids, and has a heating value of 4,300 BTU per pound as fired.
- Type 3. Garbage, consisting of animal and vegetable wastes from restaurants, hotels, hospitals, markets, and similar institutions. This type of waste contains up to 70 percent moisture and up to 5 percent noncombustible solids, and has a heating value of 2,500 BTU per pound as fired.

TOPICS DISCUSSED AND ACTION TAKEN

- Q: Your website has a searchable membership directory. Do you have a database file that contains this information? If so, would you be able to share this information with us?
- A: The information on the web is all they have. They do not have the information listed in a database.
- Q: It appears that your members consist of cemeteries and crematories. Is there some way to determine which members are operating a crematory on premises?
- A: Ninety-nine percent of the cemeteries and crematories listed on the website have a crematory. Mr. Drown said it is becoming very common for cemeteries to have a crematory because there is such a demand. He said it would be very hard to compete in this business if you didn't have a crematory because cremation is becoming much more common.
- Q: Can you suggest any other sources of information that would assist us in creating a list or inventory of operating pet crematories (vendors, other organizations)? Do you happen to know which vendor(s) supplies the majority of pet crematoria in the U.S.?
- A: The main vendors are Matthews Group, Crawford, B & L, and American (on the west coast).
- Q: Do you have an estimate on the percentage of all pet crematories in the U.S. that are members of IAPC (i.e., what portion of the industry are included in your membership)?
- A: He did not know what percentage of all pet crematories in the U.S. that are members of IAPC because he is not aware of exactly how many pet crematories there are in the United States. He said we could probably find out this information from the individual states.
