Introduction

In 1954, the Library of Congress purchased 15 letters written by Geraldine Farrar (1882-1967) to her long-time friend Mrs. Daisy Humphries. Later in 1954, Farrar donated her personal papers to the Library. Together, these two acquisitions, containing numerous scrapbooks, correspondence, and photographs, formed the basis for the Geraldine Farrar Collection, which documents the stellar career of one of America's most celebrated sopranos. Subsequent gifts by Farrar in 1958, 1959, and 1964 added additional materials to the collection. Other materials were added to the collection from time to time, including letters from Farrar to Ruth A. Businger, donated by Businger in 1967, and a photo of Farrar dating from 1967 and donated by Edwin A. McArthur in 1982. Additionally, several letters from Farrar to Florence Mosher were purchased in 1970.

Farrar's original gift contained a set of 55 phonograph records. These recordings are housed in the Motion Picture, Broadcasting, and Recorded Sound Division of the Library of Congress.

The status of the literary rights in any of the unpublished writings or compositions contained in this collection is unclear; certain materials may be restricted with respect to use and/or copying. The scrapbooks in the collection are extremely fragile and should be handled with care.

Scope and Content

Biographical materials in the collection include drafts in several versions for Farrar's autobiography Such Sweet Compulsion. Additionally, Farrar's writings contain a lecture titled "Vocal Treatise with record illustrations" as well as the typescript for a book of vocal exercises. These vocal treatises are complemented by three books of Farrar's vocal exercises dating from 1923 to 1925. Also of note are Farrar's lectures, "The Effects of War on Music," and "Music in a War-torn World," both written during World War II. The writings also include numerous versions of a lecture on the history of music titled "Music through the ages." The majority of the lectures date from the years following Farrar's retirement from her opera career in 1922.

The music in the collection is in both printed and manuscript form. The compositions by Farrar are exclusively for voice with piano accompaniment; the majority date from the late 1930's. During her tenure at the Metropolitan Opera, Farrar attracted large numbers of young admirers, who were known as the "Gerryflappers." Many of the original compositions which Farrar wrote in her retirement, such as "The Little Christmas Donkey" and "The Easter Robin," were written for the children of these admirers. Music arranged or translated by Farrar, including several vocal arrangements of works by Rachmaninoff and Kreisler, is also included.

Among the correspondence in the collection are letters, picture postcards, telegrams, and various personal notes both to and from Geraldine Farrar. The materials reflect both her private and public life. Among the more insightful and interesting materials is Farrar's life-long correspondence with Germany's Crown Prince Wilhem (1882-1951) and Crown Princess Cecelie. At Farrar's request, these letters, dating as early as 1901, remained sealed until 1979, along with other documents sent to Farrar by the German royal family. There is also a considerable amount of correspondence from the American producer David Belasco (1853-1931), Farrar's voice coach Lilli Lehmann (1848-1929), and close friend Ruth A. Businger (1893-1965). Among the notable correspondents are Teresa Carreño, Enrico Caruso, Gustave Charpentier, Cecil B. DeMille, Paul Dukas, Henry T. Finck, Henry Hadley, Reynaldo Hahn, Engelbert Humperdinck, Rockwell Kent, Fritz Kreisler, Jules Massenet, Lily Pons, Giacomo Puccini, Sergei Rachmaninof and Arturo Toscanini.

Farrar's contracts with the Metropolitan Opera from 1908 to 1918 comprise the bulk of the Contracts series. There are also a considerable amount of film contracts with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, dating from 1915 to 1919. Farrar's contract with the Berlin Royal Opera dates from 1904 while a contract dated 1940 regarding royalties from her autobiography with Greystone Press, is the most recent. Illustrative of Farrar's popularity as both a prima donna and an actress is her contract with Benjamin Claggett in 1917 regarding the production and distribution of "Geraldine Farrar Candy." Included among the contracts and business-related materials are Along with contracts are other business related materials, such as concert tour itineraries and receipts.

Scripts of radio programs and pageants appear in both manuscript and typescript forms and reflect Farrar's career as a musical commentator for various radio programs and as a volunteer in civic organizations after her retirement from opera singing. The majority of the scripts are from the years 1934 and 1935 including scripts from Farrar's guest appearances in the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts, the script from the General Electric Show on February 14, 1932 is the earliest.

The programs in the collection date from Farrar's first recitals in Melrose, Massachusetts, during her teenage years to her final appearances as a concert singer in 1931. A large number of the programs are from the 1914-22 Metropolitan Opera seasons. Additionally, there are numerous programs from Farrar's concert recitals, dating from 1922 to 1934.

The overwhelming majority of materials in the collection is found in 43 scrapbooks that cover Farrar's entire life and career. A large number of the scrapbooks, particularly the oversize scrapbooks (boxes 28, 44, 45, and 46), are in poor condition, with many loose and brittle pages. Several scrapbooks (those dating from before 1898-1898, 1914-19, and 1919-21) contain numerous photographs. The scrapbook from 1914-19 contains several pages of photos of Farrar taken during World War I to publicize the War Bonds Drive and the Victrola Records Campaign. All of the scrapbooks in the collection should be handled with extreme care.

The public service materials in the collection contain an assortment of governmental papers, forms, and notes, such as an auto log-book and lists of telephone numbers. These materials represent Farrar's participation in the Red Cross and various governmental organizations during World War II. One of the more interesting items is Farrar's sketchbook containing pencil drawings of airplanes, done while she was a ground observer in the American Women's Voluntary Service of the Army Air Force in 1943.

The photographs in the collection document Farrar's entire life and career. In addition to the many individual photographs, there are also two boxes of photographs (box 49, folders 5-8 and box 50) that were originally bound in two scrapbooks containing only photographs. Three books of film stills from Farrar's films Maria Rosa, Carmen, and The Temptation are also in the collection. A large painting of Farrar by Friedrich August von Kaulbach is part of the collection and is currently located in the administrative offices of the Music Division.

The awards and certificates date from the last forty years of Farrar's life and contain those related to her many civic and artistic activities, including her ASCAP and Society of American Arts and Letters membership certificates. Other items in the collection include several fans used by Farrar in Madama Butterfly, a framed portion of the curtain from the old Metropolitan Opera house given to her in 1940, as well as several medals and awards for her public service activities.
