Dear FCC:

When I purchased Sirius three and a half years ago, I selected them based solely on their arrangement with the NFL. However, this left me no option for hockey or baseball, my second and third favorite sports, respectively. A merger of the two companies would bring all the sports programming under one roof - a dream come true for me and others. I will never go back terrestrial radio, I am too spoiled already by the diversity of Sirius. Merging in the unique content from XM would be a great addition. I am aware of a few channels on XM that I know I enjoy. Having all the content available under one consolidated plan would allow me to discover even more. I recognize that some of favorite channels may go away following any merger, but I am confident that the net gain will outweigh the loss of any specific channel. I know nothing of the financials of the deal, but as an average subscriber, I can tell you I can strongly in favor of a merger.

Sincerely,

Doug Rosenberg
