Dear FCC:

I have been a loyal XM subscriber for years. This merger, if approved by the FCC, will be a big step backwards for the consumer. There will be LESS choices, not more. The FCC is concerned about decency yet Sirius contains some of the most foul language programming available - and are proud of it. Since Sirius is the company that will be in control of the new company, we can only expect more indecent programming to be available to a larger group of people. Is this really the message that the FCC wants to send - We are for decency as long as it doesn't affect big business?

Sincerely,

Larry Lokey
