

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE
COST ESTIMATE

May 29, 2002

S. 2530

A bill to amend the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App.)
to establish police powers for certain Inspector General agents engaged in official duties and provide an oversight mechanism for the exercise of those powers

As ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs on May 22, 2002

The bill would amend the Inspector General Act of 1978 to allow investigative agents in offices of federal inspectors general to exercise certain law enforcement powers, such as carrying a firearm and seeking and executing warrants for arrests. Investigative agents have exercised such powers through special deputation by the U.S. Marshals Service. The legislation would codify those powers and remove the responsibility for authorizing and overseeing the use of such powers from the Marshals Service. Under the bill, the individual inspector general (IG) offices would be responsible for supervising and controlling the day-to-day use of the law enforcement powers, with the Attorney General providing additional oversight. In addition, the bill would require IG offices to enter into an interagency memorandum of understanding to establish a process of periodic peer reviews of the use of the law enforcement powers by each office.

CBO estimates that implementing this bill would have no significant effect on federal spending because the bill would codify powers already exercised by IG offices, and replace one system of review and oversight with another. S. 2530 could affect direct spending because some IG offices operate within agencies that have direct spending authority; therefore pay-as-you-go procedures would apply. CBO estimates, however, that any effect on direct spending would be negligible. The bill contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would not affect the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.
