Columbia Video Network (CVN) is Columbia University's Graduate Engineering Distance Learning Program. CVN allows working professionals to pursue Masters and post-Masters level degree programs in Engineering from wherever they are. Essentially, through distance learning technology, students eliminate the need to commute and travel in order to gain access to their courses. Currently CVN has students working in the high-tech industry taking part in the program from all over the globe. CVN has been pioneering this field since 1986, currently offering six MS degrees remotely in addition to multiple Certificate programs. CVN's distance learning program received Forbes Magazine's "Best of the Web" ranking for Higher Education for the past three years running. The review can be found at:
